A Festival in My School

Our school held an international festival. Each class chose a country. My class chose Japan. We learned that in Japan, people bow when they greet, and they take off their shoes at home. We decorated our corner with paper flowers and taught everyone to write 'hello' in Japanese. The Korean class showed a traditional dance. The Turkish class served tea in small glasses. At the end, our teacher said: 'Look at us — different clothes, different food, but one happy school. That is what a global world should be.'

? Comprehension Questions (Matn savollari)

1. What did the writer's class choose?
2. What did they learn about Japan?
3. What did the Korean class show?

Script (teacher reads aloud)

Listen. Today I learned about customs. In Thailand, people press their hands together to say hello. In Brazil, people love festivals and dancing — especially in February. In some places, it is rude to refuse food. Every custom is different, but all of them show respect. Learning about them makes the world friendlier.
